As an introduction to this event, let us pose some questions:

- What is the festive occasion?
- Why are we, WCoMC, celebrating?
- What is beyond WCoMC in our profession and the Livery?

This event is the last “Great Event” that will be on Patrick’s Watch as Master 2014-15, and he wants everyone to use this dinner as a chance to see how WCoMC fits into the Consultancy Profession and the Livery Movement – and, yes, to celebrate what we have achieved and where we might stand, not that he is competitive

WCoMC has a growing vibrant membership. We have numerous volunteers who support our ProBono activities by investing and dedicating huge amounts of their time to helping Charities without any charge

We also have an energetic Education Agenda – educating the profession: the future of consulting – reaching out to consultants from across the profession and industry on current issues that affect all sectors of the economy. This is coupled to our support of the Cass Business School and the Cass Centre for Charity Effectiveness and through them numerous Charity Chief Execs and Aspiring Chief Execs, many of whom then benefit from our ProBono Support.

We have never brought this all together into one event where we can draw breath and let our hair down, just a bit (albeit for some of us this is not possible – but there are rumours that Patrick did once have long flowing hair!) So we have four special guest speakers who reflect this mix and who will help us, yes, celebrate through their insights on our work:

- Alan Leaman – CEO of the Management Consultancies Association, our profession and industry.
- Andrew Devenport – CEO of Youth Business International, our largest ProBono Client.
- Professor Steve Haberman – Dean of Cass Business School and our ‘livery school’ Cass CCE.
- Sheriff Fiona Adler – representing the overarching City Livery, our home.

So come and join your fellow Freemen and Liverymen in a celebration of our contribution to our profession and the achievements of the Civic City. There will be entertainment and a guard of honour to ensure we all enjoy the evening, which will start with an Admission Ceremony – a chance to welcome new Freemen and celebrate the Clothing of new Liverymen.
